2019 Application and Admission Procedure for International Students Undergraduate Programs

Visit our application website <http://admission.njmu.edu.cn/member/login.do>, register an account, fill in personal information, choose your program and upload the required documents.

Admissions Office will conduct an initial review and give feedback. An applicant who passes the initial review will receive a Pre-admission Letter which informs the applicant of our decision and instructs the applicant to pay a deposit.

The applicant should pay $2000 or $700 (depending on the program) as deposit within 7 days upon receiving the Pre-admission Letter. After the applicant registers on required date, the deposit will be transferred to his/her study deposit and the student needs to pay the rest of the fees after deduction of the deposit; if the applicant fails to register on time, the deposit will not be refunded.

Upon NMU Finance Department receiving the deposit, the Admissions Office will prepare an Admission Notice and apply for a JW202 form for the applicant. Once the provincial government approves the JW202 form, it will return the form to NMU. The Admissions Office will send the Admission Notice and JW202 form to the applicant.

The applicant applies for an X1 visa in an embassy or consulates of P. R. China by submitting necessary documents including the Admission Notice and JW202 form. The applicant should enter China on the X1 visa.

The applicant registers at NMU on the specified date with the original documents including the Admission Notice and JW202 form and a physical examination report.
